Gertrude Miller

Dedication

A dedication is a thank you. And we want to say thank you to Mrs. Miller for the interest she always has for her students. We have disagreed and sometimes argued with her, but from her we have gained an insight into people. Mrs. Miller has done more than teach English, she has worked to develop character.

While always aware of her role as a teacher, Mrs. Miller has become a special kind of friend, a friend who can be trusted to help any student with a problem.

This is why we want to say thank you. To you we dedicate this yearbook.

Sullivan, Framingham, Boston, Danvers, Robinson, Douglas, Mrs. Notman, David, Douglas, Berk, Rodke

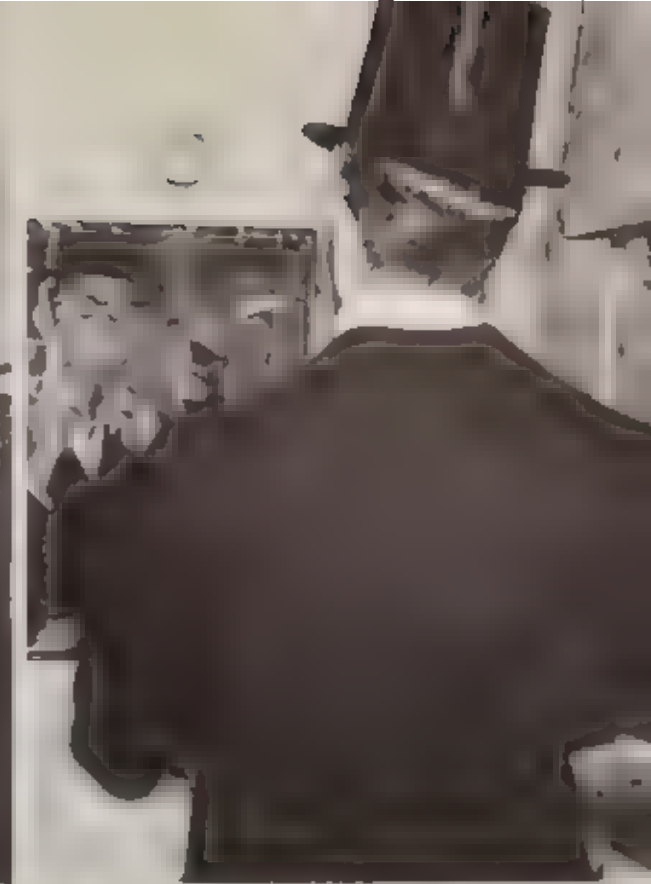

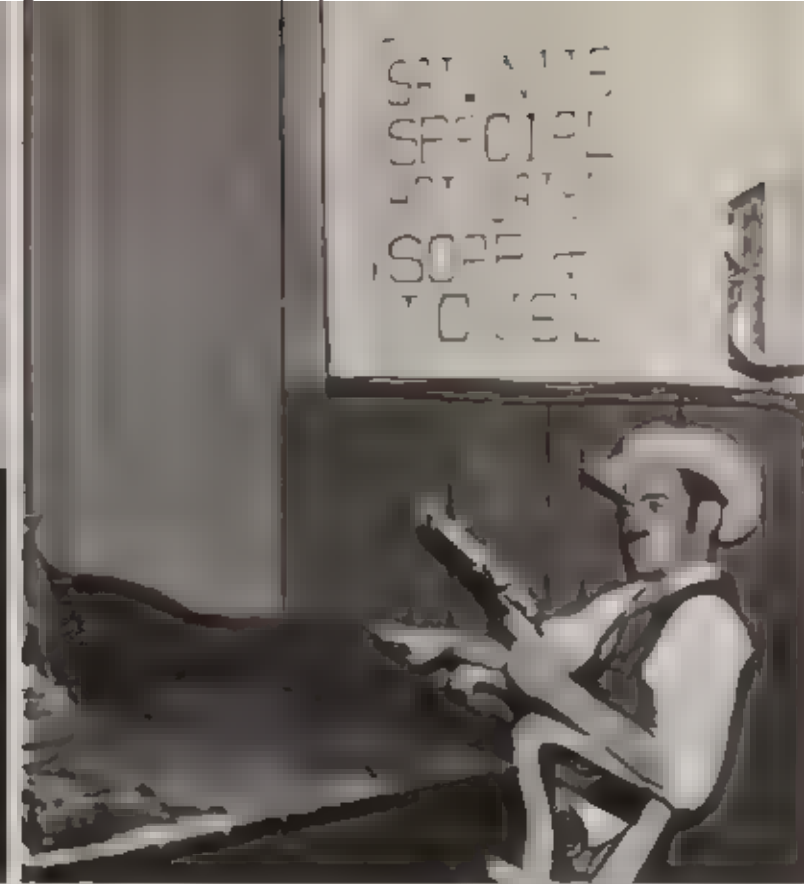

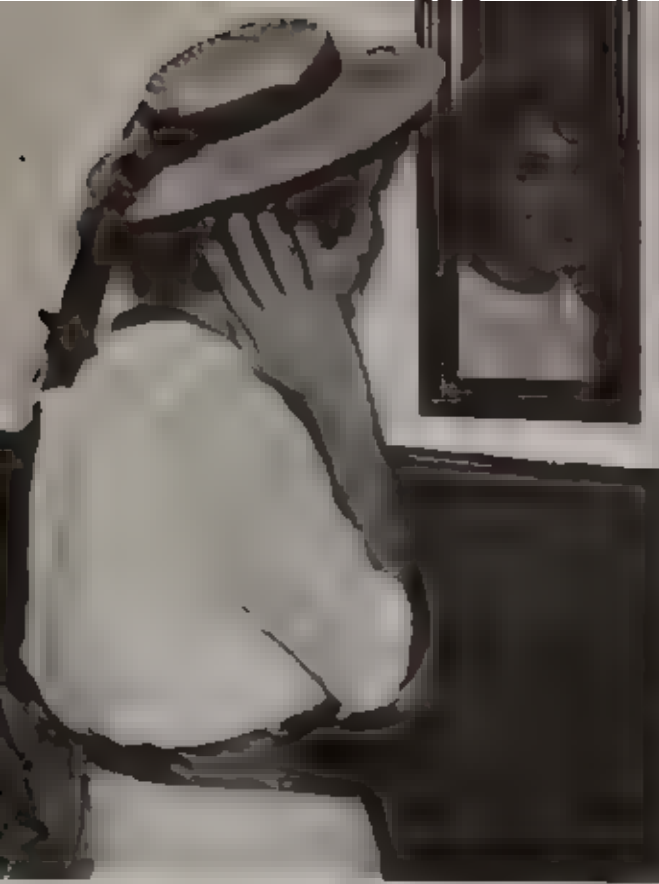

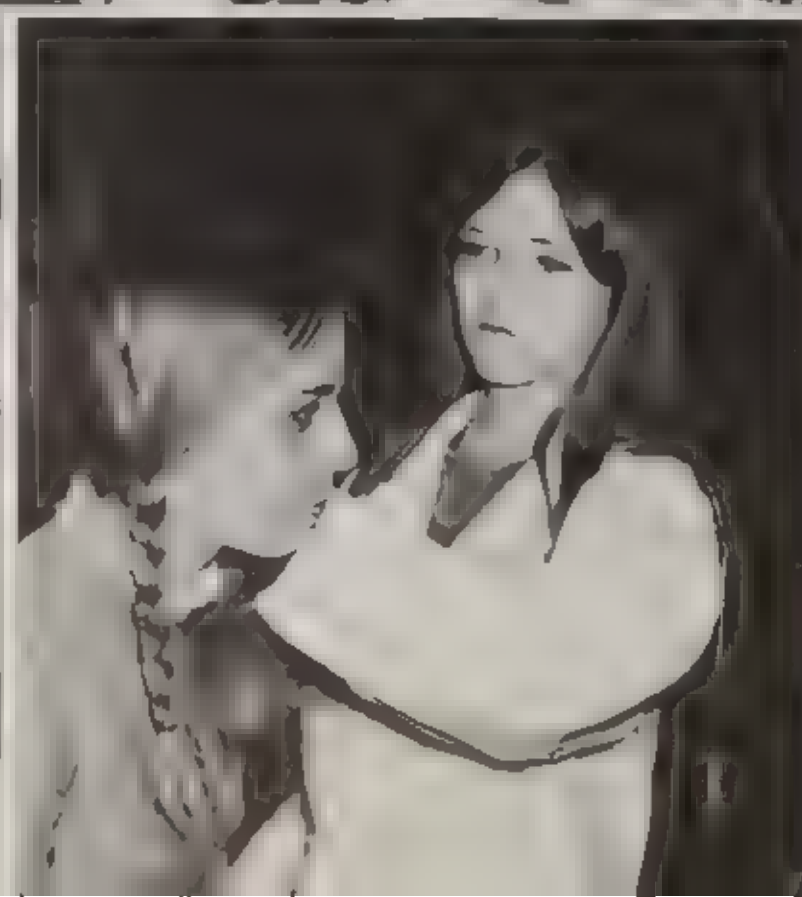

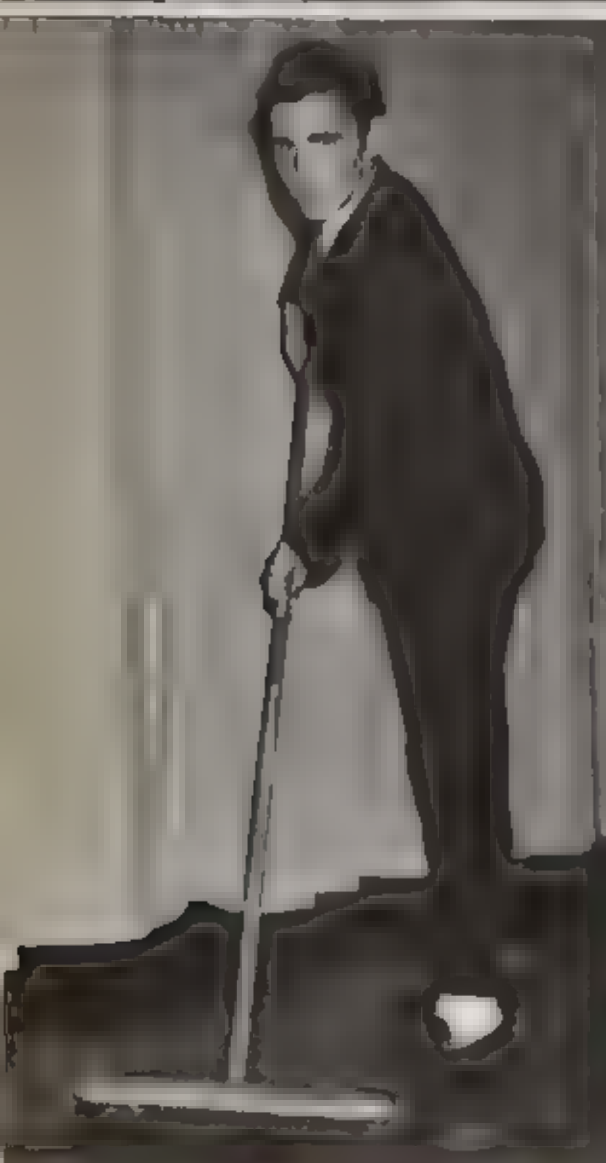

It all started when Ambrose Groves and Bert Muler, a couple of would-be Vaudeville comedians were headin' California-way. But out in the middle of the desert they were booted off the train 'cause someone had pickpocketed their tickets and money. After a couple of days of trudging across the desert they blew into Dead Man's Gulch, the wildest spot in the West.

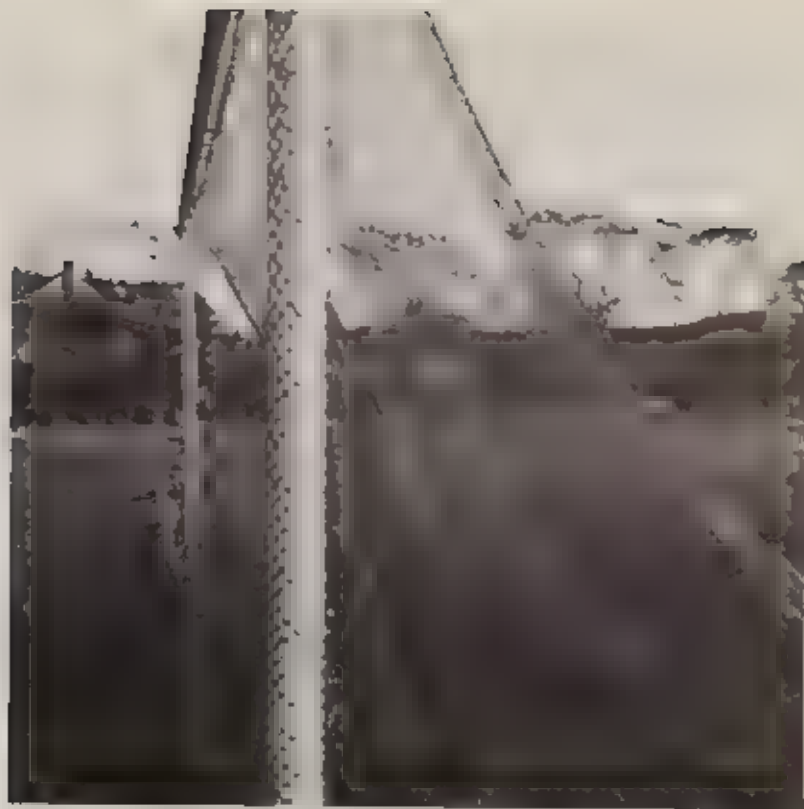

Homer the Kid and Gun Smoke Carter, the two hardest-shootin', hardest-ridin' cow pokes ever, were expected to breeze into town at any minute to quell the shootin'. When Ambrose and Bert hobbled in, they were mistaken for the West's most fearless cowpunchers. Ambrose was taken for Homer the Kid, and bungling Ambrose wound up doing everything wrong. He didn't get the goods on the crooked sheriff, he was beaten and trounced by Hoot Owl Pete, and Stinkweed practically hung him! He didn't get the heroine Nancy either. But he did get things in the most devastating of devastating messes

Class Outing

Class Prophecy

One day as I, Jayne Smith, sat on a cloud, taking the hem of my white robe up another three inches, I received an invitation to the 100th reunion. I knew that I was the only member of the class who had made it up here, and I thought it would be interesting to see what the other members of the class were up to. I decided to leave a day early so that I could look around, and so my journey began.

On my way downward, I saw a lone figure sitting mournfully on a cloud looking very perplexed. Poor Jimmy Grier had been suspended from everywhere, and since he had nothing to lose, he decided to come with me to the reunion. As we approached the "fiery gates" we were admitted by the gatekeepers, Ron Emerson and Dana Newell. Once inside, secretary Bev Wood had us sign the guest book. Close behind her was Tina Ketchopulos, who asked us each for a quarter. It seems as if she was still trying to collect the unpaid class dues.

From there we telephoned for a taxi, and I recognized the dispatcher's voice as that of Heidi Morris. The taxi arrived, driven by a blond well-built young man who proved to be another classmate, Michael Koller. He took us to a hotel and as we entered, another strong young man took our bags. He lifted all our baggage with little trouble, and as I remarked on his strength he lifted up his head and I recognized Stephen Nangle. As we went to the desk to sign the register, we were greeted by the proprietors, Nancy and Carol Tarvis.

After checking in we decided to go for a walk. We walked down an old dirt road, and we saw two motorcycles parked near a tree by the side of the road. As we came closer, we saw it was the leader of Hell's Angels, Suzanne Day, alias Cut, and her right-hand man, Terrible Tom Darcy, who didn't look so terrible as he sat strumming softly on his guitar. We walked a little farther, and we saw two long-haired young ladies sitting in a field pulling the petals off daisies. It was Marilyn Fairweather and Cindy Peterson playing he loves me, he loves me not. Marilyn grinned because he loved her and Cindy cried because he loved her not. A little beyond sat 'Wasted' Cindy Rowe listening to her transistor. We waved and walked on.

Suddenly we saw a cloud of dust appearing down the road. It looked like the Rat Patrol. We jumped out of the way just in time to avoid being hit by two low-flying jeeps driven by Joan Wood and Sherry Hanson. We decided it would be more convenient and certainly a lot safer to rent a car, and we walked until we saw a sign which said in huge letters, WE RENT ANYTHING, Prop. John Knowlton. We went in and sure enough there was Hucka, who not only rented us an old antique car, but tried to rent us everything else in the place. When Jim doubtfully asked if the old junk would run, Hucka assured us that all his cars were checked by his No. 1 mechanic, James Aspesi.

We started out, but we were hungry and decided to stop at a small roadside stand called The Sunrise, which advertised their great steamed hot dogs. We went in and heard a familiar voice say "mustard, relish, or both?" It was another classmate, Nancy Drohan. While we were there the delivery boy, Joe Poirier, came in with an order. He took them out back, and there was Jimmy Johnson carefully weighing each hot dog to make sure you didn't get too much for your money. As we went back outside, we saw a strange figure walking past. He appeared to be an eccentric who thought he was on safari, but on closer examination, proved to be none other than the Great White Hunter, James Cleveland.

We stopped back at the hotel to freshen up, and we saw the housekeeper hard at work. We recognized her as Terry Wentzell, but she was so busy scrubbing to keep everything clean and spotless that she didn't even notice us pass her. After a change in clothes, we decided to go down to the beach. On the way we passed a huge farm. Riding across the field was the old farmer himself, Bruce Drohan, chewing hard on a toothpick. As we got down to the beach we saw a girl wrapped in a blanket watching a lone surfer ride the waves, and we knew it was another classmate, Bonnie Waddell. Suddenly, the surfer "hung ten" and the efficient lifeguard, Casey Eaton, rescued her. We walked farther down the beach and saw two lobstermen coming onto shore. We had found two more classmates, John Spiewak and Robert Day, who had gone into partnership and now monopolized the lobster industry. It seemed as if they had a huge fleet run by seaman Don Jansen, with strongman Steven Hale providing the muscle power.

We started back to the hotel to rest for a while when Jimmy stepped on a broken bottle, and we decided we'd better go to the hospital to have a doctor look at the cut. Head Nurse Cathy Poirier greeted us at the door, and she called another nurse, Julie Anderson, who promptly arrived with a wheel chair. As we went down the corridor to the out-patient ward, we saw a tall figure crouched over an irate gentleman. It was Nurse Peggy Ahearn, trying to convince the patient he could eat much better if he would put his false teeth back in. At the door of the out-patient ward, we were met by M.D. Mark Douglas, who took Jim in for stitches. We were discharged by Nurse Ruth George, and we returned to the hotel.

After a rest we decided we would go to a famous restaurant for dinner. As we went in an orchestra was playing, and we recognized Keith Cross playing the flute, Wilton Syckes — the trombone, Dana Woods — the drums; and as the piano player turned toward us, we recognized the great master, Jerry Lashua. Soon they were joined by two famous singers, Jack Amero and Pam Waters. We were seated and watched the performance of two dancers, Jane Hooper and the famous exotic dancer Joann Hoy. We were so absorbed in the show that we hardly noticed the waitress until she tripped and nearly dumped water in our laps. We looked up to see a slightly embarrassed Pam Salo, who took our order. As we looked around we saw many people. Two famed models known as the Twiggy Twins, Laurie Gerard and Binky Grover sat across the room. They were soon joined by another model, Joan Beebe, who waved hello to two society figures, who turned out to be Sue Dawson and Robert Parry. A sleeping figure, Chris Erickson, raised her head from the table, looked around, yawned, and went back to sleep. Across the aisle from us sat three athletic stars, Peter Bruni, Emily David, and the fantastic baseball star, David Smith. Next to them sat the mad scientist Marion Edwards, who was examining her glass of water with a microscope to spot the algae that might be in it. Next to us sat the famous beautician Priscilla George talking to two old maid schoolteachers, English teacher Leslie Burgess and French teacher Pat Gale, who came here simply for the excitement. Next to them, ogling at Miss Hoy's exotic dance, was playboy Vic Williams. After dinner there was a one-man comedy show by Jack Olson, who introduced Queen for a Day Chris O'Connor, who was accompanied by George King, who had appropriately changed his name to King George for the occasion. On our way out we saw a final famous figure, Librarian Charles Quimby. As we left, Jimmy commented on the excellent food. The proprietor said the praise should go to the chef, Robert Eaton.

On the way home we passed Frank Nelson sitting in front of a ruined church with his "church key." A little farther on we stopped in for a cool ice cream — it was hot down there — and found another classmate, Janet Knowlton, who served us heaping dishes of ice cream.

The next day we rested, and that evening we went to the address on the invitation. We were not at all surprised to be at Faraday Inn owned by Karen Breakell. At the beginning of the evening, Eric Hutchinson presented the president with a new watch. It seemed as if everyone in the class had come except Susan Nelson, who had stayed home to wash her hair because it was Thursday, and Gera Shumaker, who was last heard of still raving about the unfinished yearbook.

Class Banquet

Class Will

- I, Peggy Ahearn, leave my height to Wiggins so that he can be tall, dark, and handsome, rather than just dark and handsome
- I, Jack Amero, leave my loudness to some quiet person.
- I, Julie Anderson, leave my "perfect" high school attendance to my brother.
- I, Jim Aspesi, leave my skid marks behind me.
- I, Joan Beebe, leave my courage.
- I, Karen Breakell, leave winter walks on Cape Hedge Beach to Punky and Marsha.
- I, Peter Bruni, leave all my casts, bandages, and tape to anyone who needs them.
- I, Leslie Burgess, leave my love life to any junior who is desperate enough to take it.
- I, Jim Cleveland, leave to all the kids in next year's Senior Class the trouble of trying to think up their class wills.
- I, Keith Cross, leave my tennis muscle to Alan Tarr, and my mechanical ability to anyone who is good with his hands.
- I, Tom Darcy, leave, for protective purposes only, my ten ounce boxing gloves and right hook to Jimmy Woods.
- I, Emily David, leave all the servile parts in drama to any one with enough sex.
- I, Sue Dawson, leave my acute sense of time to Sandy, who does not need it.
- I, Robert Day, leave my ability to irritate Mr. Mitchell to an able junior.
- I, Suzanne Day, leave a space in the parking lot for any other motorcycle that is being held together by scotch tape.
- I, Mark Douglas, leave my fine attendance record to Rhonda in the hope that she will uphold the family tradition.
- I, Bruce Drohan, leave my seat as the lone male in biology to any junior boy with a strong stomach and a weak mind.
- I, Nancy Drohan, leave a February ski-week to Annette Dann.
- I, Casey Eaton, leave all the stamina, courage, and patience that I have had to use for the past 13 years to put up with my brother Chris.
- I, Bob Eaton, leave the mess in my locker to any one who wants to clean it.
- I, Marion Edwards, leave to Mr. Marman one algebra book
- I, Ron Emerson, leave the Cove Power Presidency to Crip.
- I, Chris Erickson, leave my daily nap in Ideology to some tired junior.
- I, Marilyn Fairweather, leave my enthusiasm to my favorite youngest sister.
- I, Pat Gale, leave my mathematical brain to my sister.
- I, Priscilla George, leave all my passes from all my studies.
- I, Ruth George, leave the task of hooking gym for the first half of the year and not getting caught to Linda Johnson.
- I, Laura Gerard, leave my bottle of penicillin to Mr. Perry, just in case he needs it for next year's Senior Class Play.
- I, Jim Grier, leave my good discipline to anyone who needs it
- I, Binky Grover, leave to Sheila Drohan my great driving ability.
- I, Steve Hale, leave my wall in the corridor to any deserving underclassman.
- I, Sherry Hanson, leave my position on the ropes to my succeeding "official curtain puller."
- I, Jane Hooper, would have left my great beauty, but I need it. So I leave to Mr. Perry all the left-over Mad

Mods.

- I, Joann Hoy, leave gladly.
- I, Eric Hutchinson, leave my trusty Swiss-made watch.
- I, Donald Janson, leave my Triumph to anybody who can handle it
- I, Jim Johnson, leave all my green stamps to the kids who have put gas in my car.
- I, Tina Ketchopulos, leave my ability to write forged notes to Janice Strole.
- I, George King, leave my tie undone.
- I, Janet Knowlton, leave my "well-broken-in" ice cream scoop at Tuck's to anyone who wants to take it over.
- I, John Knowlton, leave my telephone number to the girls next year: 546-2726.
- I, Mike Koller, leave my locker #485 to Chris Service, and a pair of old sneakers with a big hole in the bottom to anyone foolish enough to take them.
- I, Jerry Lashua, leave my empty locker to Kenny Holmes.
- I, Heidi Morris, leave my ability to shovel down double lunches every day to Joanne Larson.
- I, Steve Nangle, leave my permission for Kenny Holmes to clean up after the senior party.
- I, Frank Nelson, leave my church key to whoever needs it.
- I, Sue Nelson, leave Thursday for any junior girl who has to wash her hair.
- I, Dana Newell, leave 110 feet of rubber at the beginning of Forrest Street to Kenny Holmes, for him to match with his Ford when he gets one.
- I, Chris O Connor, leave my bridge to anyone who wants to cross it.
- I, Jack Olson, leave Mr. Marman.
- I, Robert Parry, leave my locker to whoever can locate it.
- I, Cindy Peterson, leave with the hopes of my being with B.A.F.
- I, Cathy Poirier, leave my battered megaphone to the next cheerleader named Cathy.

- I, Joe Poirier, leave my bloodshot eyes to any junior boy with a bottle of Murine and a strong stomach.
- I, Charles Quimby, leave all my free time to roam the corridors to Billy George and Larry Osier.
- I, Cindy Rowe, leave my ability to get "wasted" in office practice to Bonnie Sweet. Good luck!
- I, Pam Salo, leave my "trips" down the stairs to anyone who is clumsy enough to deserve them.
- I, Gera Shumaker, leave Mr. Ives to his politics and Mrs. Miller to her philosophies.
- I, David Harvey Smith, leave my 237 pairs of white socks to anyone who dares to wear them.
- I, Jayne Smith, leave my brother, who doesn't wear short skirts, to Mr. Nolan, who doesn't wear short skirts either.
- I, John Spiewak, leave.
- I, Bill Syckes, leave to some unlucky soul my daily rides from Gloucester to Rockport.
- I, Carol Tarvis, leave my diet to anyone who has the will-power to use it
- I, Nancy Tarvis, leave my job in the supply room to Peanut Howard, and my typing jobs to Alan Tarr.
- I, Bonnie Waddell, leave my acting ability to anyone who has the courage to get up on the stage.
- I, Pam Watters, leave my straight hair to Andy Robonson.
- I, Terry Wentzell, leave a space in the parking lot for any hard-earned, good-running Chevy that seems to be a target for reckless truck drivers.
- I, Victor Williams, leave my Ph.D. in Fouling Things Up to anyone working with Mr. Perry.
- I, Beverley Wood, leave my worn out typing erasers and four years of hard labor (cough!) to my sister Bethany.
- I, Joan Wood, leave . . . with Greg.
- I, Buddy Woods, leave my musical ability to Jerry Murphy, who needs it more than I do.

AMERICAN LEGION

Extends to the Class of 1968
Health — Happiness — Success
as You Enter Life's Journey

Through our work on the yearbook we have already gained enjoyment from it. At times we editors, as well as Mr. Perry, have doubted that the book would come off the presses before the 1969 yearbook did. Well we may have missed all our deadlines, but as they say better late than never. We have had our troubles but we think we have succeeded in accomplishing the purpose of a yearbook. We have captured the highlights of the senior year. It is our hope that in looking through the pages of the yearbook of the class of 1968, you have recalled some of the enjoyment of that year.
